

Jae-young Lee

Jae-young Lee earned his PhD in Art Education at University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. Following 7 years of full-time public school teaching at elementary schools, he had taught "Art and Creativity" at UNIST(Ulsan National Institute of Science and Technology). He is currently an associate professor at Korea National University of Education. He is teaching art education. Also, he is a head professor of the graduate school of culture and arts education at KNUE. He is working for 7 years as the chief editor of Journal of Research in Art Education: Korean Society for Education through Art. His research has been published and presented regionally and nationally in South Korea. Three books NAEA published contain his book chapters regarding visual culture art education, holistic approaches to art education, and qualitative research in art education. His recent research projects include STEAM program development, the application of new national art curriculum, the policies and practices of culture and arts education. He is currently interested in the humanistic value of art education, culture and arts education, sustainable development in art education, and qualitative research in art education.